Just click "Shop Now" to go to the seller's store, Venus is the brightest object in the sky, almost exactly half the size of the moon in diameter, and Jupiter is right next to it. But Jupiter is too big to see much detail, but Venus is a brilliant object with its own phase to learn more about. In its dayside and nightside phases, Venus has a golden glow and can be mistaken for the sun, a perfect target for amateur astronomers. On this recording, I will show you how to view the different phases of Venus, from sun to night side, day to day. First, I will take a short video tutorial where I explain the different phases of Venus. Then I will demonstrate how to watch the phases of Venus in the sky.
