The present invention relates to an electric circuit for a spindle motor of a disc player and, more particularly, to an electric circuit for the spindle motor of the disc player in which a current consumption of the disc player is reduced and a high sound quality and high-speed rotation are realized. Generally, a spindle motor for driving a turntable and a pickup of the disc player is generally driven by the so-called full-wave inverter system. However, according to the full-wave inverter system, a direct current is supplied from a battery to the spindle motor and, accordingly, a substantial amount of current is consumed.

As a result, the life of the battery is shortened and it is difficult to use the disc player in a battery-driven mode. In order to solve the above problem, a half-bridge inverter system was proposed as the spindle motor driving system. In the half-bridge inverter system, an inverter circuit is inserted between a DC voltage source and a spindle motor, so that a current for driving the spindle motor flows through the inverter circuit. Accordingly, it is possible to reduce the current consumption. However, the half-bridge inverter system has problems in that the full-wave power supply cannot be utilized and a voltage of the spindle motor cannot be increased. Q: Why do we use  $\mathbb{Z}$  rather than  $\mathbb{Z}/n\mathbb{Z}$  in characteristic  $p$ ? Why do we use  $\mathbb{Z}$  rather than  $\mathbb{Z}/n\mathbb{Z}$  in characteristic  $p$ ? Is it because it
