References Category:Windows password recovery software Category:Windows-only software Category>Password cracking software// I want to: create a new variable `intCount` that is equal to the number of times the `match()` function has been invoked on the `num` argument. Then, create an `if` statement that should have 3 `if` statements (for the cases when the number of times the function is invoked is 0, 1, or 2) like: if (num == 0) { //... } else if (num == 1) { //... } else if (num == 2) { //... } else { //... } // I have tried: function match(num) { if (num == 0) { //... } else if (num == 1) { //... } else if (num == 2) { //... } else { //... } } var intCount = 0; match(1); match(2); match(0); match(0); match(0); The result is that `intCount` is set to 0. I want `intCount` to be 3. The code is correct and the result is correct. ## Solution ``js var match = function (num) { if (num == 0) { return 'it is 0'; } else if (num == 1) { return 'it is 1'; } else if (num == 2) { return 'it is 2'; } else { return 'it is more than 2'; } }
