Q: T-SQL – Creating a view to SELECT a subset of records based on a 2nd query I've got a query I'm running against a table to create a list of sites with activity on them. This query returns me sites with more than one activity with details on each activity and a DATEDIFF of when the activity was created. The table consists of Site, Activity (a record of an action) and StartDate (DATE column). The query works fine returning one row per site with the DATEDIFF and number of activity records. I'm trying to create a view using the same query that will show me a list of the same sites, but only for the ACTIVITY records that are within the last 30 days of the current date. This will allow me to display a list of the activities for a particular site, but that site may be showing up in another list as a result of a different activity. I would like the list to display all activities from a site with a DATEDIFF greater than or equal to 30 days. SQL I'm working with is: `SELECT DISTINCT Site, V_Activity.ActivityName, ActivityStartDate = (SELECT MAX(CAST(ActStartDate as DATE)) FROM dbo.Activity WHERE Site = V_Activity.Site 2d92ce491b`
