Honduras' government has announced plans to begin dredging the Panama Canal starting next month, with a deadline of November to finish the job and for the project to be completed. The cost of the project has been estimated at $8.2 billion and originally the dredging was expected to begin in March 2015, but in June 2014 a significant delay was announced and the dredging was not due to begin until 2017 at the earliest.

Despite the delay, the project is still a flagship issue for the government of Juan Orlando Hernandez and has proven controversial domestically and internationally. President Hernandez praised the decision to start dredging the canal, saying it would help the country's development. Honduras has a population of around 8.9 million people, the majority of whom live in poverty. Mr Hernandez's popularity has fallen as his government has been embroiled in corruption allegations, prompting a brief coup and a State of Emergency. The country is the subject of an ongoing United Nations investigation, with the US ambassador to the UN, Samantha Power, recently speaking to the organisation about the government's lack of progress on criminal prosecutions. Honduras has also recently emerged as a major transit hub for drug cartels. In 2015, the US state department said that "in January 2015, officials in the National Directorate of Migration (Direccion General de Migracion, Dgm) discovered a secret compartment containing 12.3 pounds of cocaine in a shipment of balsa wood coming from Nicaragua."Q: How to get the latest revision of a subset of objects by a specific ID I am using MongoDB 3.4.
