Well, the two teams that haven't been getting much national attention in the past month, that is. "I've watched [Creighton's] games on TV all the way from here," Wichita State senior guard Jarvis Johnson said. "I grew up in the St. Louis area. I remember my friends and family coming down here to see us play. I've seen Creighton's players all the way back in high school." WSU senior guard Billy Preston said the Shockers are accustomed to attracting an abundance of fans, and even being greeted by some with his hometown of Flint, Michigan. "We live and die with the crowd that's cheering for us," Preston said. "It's something that we're used to. We were rooting for Florida State to win, even though they were on our schedule. In our eyes, we didn't want to lose to them." The Shockers have certainly had their share of disappointments in the past year. The second-seeded team that knocked off Kentucky to reach the Final Four only to lose to VCU, has struggled a bit since then. WSU's last two tournament wins were both against lower-seeded teams, but they still qualified for the Elite Eight on the basis of their regular-season record. The Shockers (30-8) advanced to the Elite Eight for the fourth time in the last six years, joining Florida, Syracuse and Connecticut. They will face fifth-seeded Indiana, which is in the Final Four for the first time since 2010. The Hoosiers (29-8) advanced to the Elite Eight for the third time in the last five years and the first time since 1999. "Indiana is a very good team," Preston said. "We know we've got to go in and play our best basketball to get to the championship. "We're prepared for whatever they throw at us. They do have guys that can shoot the ball really well and they're a very good defensive team, but we're going to have to go in and be our best selves." WSU head coach Gregg Marshall has made some of the best mid-major teams in the country, 2d92ce491b
