SrvAdmin For Windows

SrvAdmin is a portable application which allows you to do the same things you can do in NT Service Control Panel. However, it is much more flexible. It also allows you to easily administer services running on the remote computer. With SrvAdmin: Specify the computer name you want to administrate services on. As usual, you must have corresponding privileges on the remote machine to be able to manage services. Change configurations of the service, including the name, boot type, error control type, binary file path, type and account information of the service. Uninstall services and install new services. List dependent services by double-clicking the service in the list. Operate with services, devices (Devices Control Panel applet) or both. Sort the list by any field. Unicode application SrvAdmin Installation: To install the application, run the executable file, and then select "Next". Read the license agreement, and then agree by clicking "Agree". Please choose "Yes" or "No". Press "Next" to continue installation. The application will be installed on the "System 32" folder. Note: SrvAdmin is a Unicode application. It is extremely important that you are running the binary file in its locale. For example, if you are running SrvAdmin in the English (United States) locale, do not run the binary file in the Spanish or Japanese locales. Some of the widgets and dialog boxes will not be correctly displayed. 03/25/2002 SrvAdmin v4.1 SrvAdmin is now Unicode ready. New functionality: Specify the computer name you want to administrate services on. As usual, you must have corresponding privileges on the remote machine to be able to manage services. Change configurations of the service, including the name, boot type, error control type, binary file path, type and account information of the service. Uninstall services and install new services. List dependent services by double-clicking the service in the list. Operate with services, devices (Devices Control Panel applet) or both. Sort the list by any field. 09e8f5149f
