It was the capital of the Xieng Khuang Kingdom until the French conquest of Laos in 1893. Location The city was located on the banks of the Mekong just downstream of the confluence with another, larger river. In 1996, its population was in the range of one thousand, while the town of Ban Kao in the province of Xiangkhouang, about 12 miles downstream on the Mekong, had 6,000 residents. The exact location of Mangowee was not known with accuracy before the mid-1980s, but it is now believed to be about 30 miles from Xiengkhouang city and about 20 miles above the junction of the Mekong with its tributary the Nam Khe. It lies a little east of the confluence of the Nam Khe with the Mekong, near the confluence of the Nam Khe with its tributary the Đông Lôi. The Mekong itself makes a large curve northeastward just west of the confluence and then flows southeastward again as it nears the Gulf of Thailand. The town of Ban Kao, which is the commercial center of the southern part of Xiengkhouang province, has about 4,000 inhabitants. Access
