Acetabular protrusion (AP) is a common developmental dysplasia of the hip (DDH). It is characterized by anterior protrusion of the iliac bone and enlargement of the femoral head with preservation of femoral head sphericity. Proper radiologic diagnosis of AP may help to avoid unnecessary surgical intervention. In cases of high-grade AP, an ischemic insult to the femoral head ensues, causing osteonecrosis or avascular necrosis, usually affecting children between two and six years of age. We report a case of a six-year-old boy with right-side AP and limited range of motion of the right hip. Radiologic examination showed a right-side AP characterized by aspherical femoral head and acetabular protrusion. Acetabular protrusion syndrome was thought to be the cause of the patient's symptoms. He underwent open reduction and screw fixation of the iliopsoas tendon. After surgery, his hip range of motion was improved, and the patient was symptom-free. AP is a unique cause of hip pain in young children. It may be diagnosed radiologically as a radiographically confirmed deformity.Videos: 2011 Indycar Grand Prix at Texas Motor Speedway – Main Event Plus 2 Above is the first full race in 2011 of the Indycar Series in the United States.
