The ViewHelper must be plugged in to the application in order to be used. In this tutorial we will be using the view helpers to wrap up your form. For more detailed informations, please refer to the Zend Framework 2 documentation: Our aim is to add a form. We will be using the form helper to let us make use of all form attributes. ApPHP MVC Framework is an open-source, lightweight, PHP framework focusing on developers who need a clean, well-structured, and effective framework for developing their MVC applications. Designed for an easy learning curve, the framework comes with a solid documentation, support, and many other resources at your disposal. It is distributed in a single archive file, but you can also get it from GitHub. Settled ahead on the web, a huge chunk of the content you are now reading came by way of a web portal, offering an extensive range of features such as information and news, multimedia and other useful things, as well as plenty of online content. This is indeed what the net portals are all about. The best web design is one that is not too flashy, makes navigation easy, and allows search engines to crawl and index it easily. However, while these three elements are very important, most people put a lot of emphasis on them to the exclusion of all the other necessary design elements. What does a net portal look like? Well, it should have at least a fairly light color palette, consisting of one or more secondary colors, such as green, blue, orange, and purple, along with other light colors. A net portal should also include lots of white space and text that is easy on the eyes. It should also have a great visual appeal. Colors such as red and orange are fantastic, while brown and beige are also fine. Finally, the site should have strong visual hierarchy and consistent user flows. If it is not easy to navigate, it probably will not be well ranked by the search engines either. This is why it is best to have one web design for all the different areas of the web portal, as opposed to using two or more web designs, as this will be cumbersome for the users. The good news is that with the features built into the WordPress platform, you will not have any problems in this regard. The WordPress theme for web portals is a template called "PremiumPress" and it is a great template. It is very easy to customize and comes with lots of other features. Create a web portal from scratch or a blog with WordPress. If you are comfortable using WordPress, then going with the PremiumPress theme is probably the way to go. Using WordPress or any other platform, however, will not be the best way of going about it. The fact is that there is
