I've read that in a symmetric information game, if the Nash equilibrium is unique, and there are no more than $n-1$ non-symmetric Nash equilibria, where n is the number of players, then the game has more than n symmetric Nash equilibria, and the game is non-symmetric. I can't seem to understand why this holds. How do you show the symmetry of the game? A: Consider a 2×2 symmetric game where the payoffs are given by $$\begin{matrix} \begin{array}{c} \text{player} \\ & r_1 \\ \hline 1 & 5 \\ 2 & 4 \end{array} & \text{and} & \begin{array}{c} \text{player} \\ & r_2 \\ \hline 1 & 4 \\ 2 & 5 \end{array} \end{matrix}$$
 The first row corresponds to the first player, the second row corresponds to the second player. Player 1 can choose between playing "I win" and playing "I lose" in the first game, and playing "I win" in the second game. Likewise player 2 can choose between playing "I win" and playing "I lose" in the first

Markup Assist: Manage your document portfolio with the ability to edit, add, and organize your designs in a single file. Import it to AutoCAD as an assembly or part. (video: 6:20 min.) PDF Tools and PDF Compatibility: Automatically take a screen shot of a PDF and convert it to a DWG file, no more waiting for a screen dump. Just take the screen shot and open it. (video: 4:17 min.) Multiple Scenario View: Drag and drop groups of blocks to quickly create a building module, and support for interaction with objects to show and hide a group in different scenarios. (video: 3:37 min.) Take a screen shot: Click in any window and take a screen shot of an entire window, right-click the thumbnail to view it, or save it. Now you can take a screen shot of any AutoCAD window, no more waiting for a screen dump. Mouse Support for Windows 10: Getting away from the keyboard. Use the mouse to open, edit, and view all of your designs. (video: 1:23 min.) Map Support: Build your own custom maps of the world. Draw roads and rivers, place cities, create shorelines, and customize colors and symbols to suit your needs. When you're ready to share your map, just convert it into a DXF or DWG file. (video: 1:42 min.) Easel Filter: A new set of high-performance filters for the Dynamic Input Editor. Easily apply multiple filters to the same set of blocks and move blocks on and off of the filter set. (video: 1:16 min.) ToolTips: For navigation and editing controls, the classic tool tip is no longer needed. A new "tool tip" allows you to display information or hints in the tool bar, or anywhere on the screen. Word Wrap: A new feature that makes it easier to work on long lines of text. Word wrap allows you to view lines of text even if they're longer than the display width. (video: 1:46 min.)
