More powerful editing capabilities can be purchased from third-party developers, such as Photoshop Elements. Creating a New Photo Project in Photoshop In this exercise, you find out how to create a new empty photo project to contain your next image editing action. You want to use a project to save and reuse your images. Projects are different from layers because they allow you to apply effects to all copies or instances of your image within the project. If you apply an effect to a layer, it is only applied to that layer. Because a project is not actually a layer, it allows you to use the same effect on all of your images. Note that you can also create a blank document for an image by using File⇒New, or choosing the Blank tab from the File menu. If you plan to reuse your images, it's a good idea to rename the document and save it. You are free to do so, but if you don't, Photoshop sorts the images in the same order in which they appear in the source images. If you change your mind and change the project name, it won't sort your images in a way that you find confusing. If you need to get an image out of Photoshop for printing, right-click (control-click) the image and choose Save for Web and Devices. 1. From the File menu, choose New⇒Photoshop Project. The New Photoshop Project dialog box appears, as shown in Figure 8-1. Figure 8-1: A new project can be used to contain a batch of images. 2. In the Name text box, type a name for your project. If you use the same name for multiple projects, you can always save the project as a preset so that it appears in the New Project dialog box when you open it again. You can download photoshop-presets.com for a list of available presets. 3. From the Choose a Folder drop-down menu, choose a location to store your project. 4. From the Source Format drop-down menu, choose the format that you're going to use for the images. By default, Photoshop opens files in the sRGB color space with an index file extension (JPG, TIF, or PBM). This color space is popular among most Web browsers and is the default color space for Windows Color Management (WinCM). You need to choose a different file format for

The diagnosis of ventilator-associated pneumonia (VAP) was prospectively studied in 55 mechanically ventilated patients. Microbiologic samples and chest radiographs were obtained on days 1 to 3, and bacterial cultures and chest radiographs were repeated when clinical signs or laboratory results suggested the onset of pneumonia. Eight of the 16 patients in whom the diagnosis of VAP was made by radiologic criteria alone had negative microbiologic results for organisms known to be capable of causing pneumonia. Antibody responses to at least one of the five organisms commonly associated with nosocomial pneumonia were determined in patients with the diagnosis of VAP and in patients in whom the diagnosis of VAP was excluded by radiologic criteria. There was no significant association between the presence or absence of antibody and subsequent development of VAP. We conclude that antibody responses to intracellular organisms or invasive fungal infections are not helpful in the diagnosis of VAP.Q: Can

Five good things. 1. I am very happy my wife and I found this during our hike this weekend: a bit damp, but absolutely the most beautiful rock formation to scale in our area. Scaling is a skill that most people never truly learn. We hope to pass it on to our friends and family. 2. Last night I successfully finished my first four mile trail run (yesterday was a horrible training run and today was a little better). I was the last person out. I had completed my second year of coach training at The Big Run this year, the big group run/training run held each year near the University of Connecticut. This year I had a bunch of amazing teammates that I trained with throughout the summer, which has definitely been an amazing experience. I've been running regularly since our middle school years, and I would say for a lot of years I was pretty far off the times I currently run. I'm very happy to say I was the fastest guy by just over 2 minutes, and was able to complete the entire course. I am most proud to be in the top 1% of 5K runners in the area, and overall very pleased with the results. We can do this! 3. Today was also a very successful pick up. We got our Easy RoRo from the Costco in Connecticut. It's perfect! I am not much of a beer drinker, but this beer is so delicious! I'm hoping to have a few cheers to help me run tomorrow (I'm headed out to Bridgeport tonight to run a 5K). If you are ever in the Connecticut area you absolutely need to stop by and check it out. Go to Costco near the UConn campus. 4. I got some great coaching training this year and love the practice. I was really able to push my ability for longer than I would have imagined and it feels really great to know I can really run for a long time. Best of all it is something that can be accomplished at our age and levels. I love the added reminder of my ability. 5. I love my wife. I'll see you tomorrow! -MW "There is nothing better than training in a place you love."'It is very hard to launch a product without a good product'. These are the famous words spoken by Apple founder Steve Jobs in a recent interview by Walter Isaacson
