Biography Sopot was born in Włoszakowski village. In 1949 he graduated from the National Film School in Łódź, where he later served as a lecturer. In his early career he worked in the Polish cinemas, where he wrote and directed many films, together with Jerzy Kawalerowicz and Aleksander Ford. In 1958 he won the Silver Medal at the Warsaw Film Festival for his first film The Footsteps of a Man (1958). Sopot shot several films throughout the 1960s, and was one of the few Soviet-bloc Polish directors to make films with a cultural and social focus. He created one of the most influential cult films, The Visit to a Nursing Home (Wiza w pułapce, 1964) with Polish actresses Krystyna Kobiela and Wanda Sypień. The film was often criticized for it's over length. In 1968 he became a member of the Polish Writers' Association. In 1981 he shot the music video for the song "Beauty's Dream" by Tangerine Dream, featuring Christa Ludwig. After 1983 he gave up making films, concentrating instead on painting and conducting his own musical band. The 24-year break was not publicly acknowledged until 1993, after which he released a documentary film called "I was in the parallel world" (Ja byłem w państwie paralelnem, 1994), in which he talked about his life as a filmmaker. The documentary was screened at the Warsaw Film Festival the next year. In 1996 Sopot was diagnosed with lung cancer. He succumbed to the disease on 25 May 1998, aged sixty-five. He was buried at the Powązki Cemetery in Warsaw. Filmography The Footsteps of a Man (Pierwsza k
